Q: How to correctly use a Thread in Java? Basically I want to obtain a thread that will be able to read a file and constantly process it, and send it back to the main thread. When processing is complete, the main thread will continue the processing. Here is the code I have so far.

try { //open the file FileInputStream fis = new FileInputStream("/Users/me/Desktop/LOG_1.txt"); //get the contents int data = fis.read(); while(data!=-1) { //process the value here data = fis.read(); //store the processed value int new_value = data + 20; //write the value fos.write(new_value); } fis.close(); } catch (FileNotFoundException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } catch (IOException e) { e.printStackTrace(); }

 This of course does not work as in cannot read the file while still being in the loop. If I do have the try statement at the end of the loop, it seems to create a new thread every time I try it. I have also noticed the `java.io.IOException: stream closed` error when I try this. From what I have read and tried, I am close to a solution, but I just cannot find what the problem is. Here are some of the posts that I have looked at already. I have tried some of their suggested solutions, but this usually ends up in a dead end. Constant writing in java (thread) Thread in Java: continuously writing to
